Passepartout (Rahmen)

A passepartout (French for "pass through" and "everywhere") is a paper or cardboard frame used in art to enhance the focus on a graphic, photo, or painting. By drawing attention away from the picture frame itself, it directs the viewer's gaze to the artwork, ensuring the piece remains the focal point. This framing technique also allows the artwork to fit into a larger frame, emphasizing the piece within a broader context.

CONNECTION TO WORK

In my performance installation „Überkochen“, the boiling kettles are the central artwork, with bureaucratic procedures acting as the frame, like a passepartout. This framing highlights the pressure-filled environment without overwhelming it, directing the audience's attention to the kettles and encouraging reflection on the underlying tension and frustration.

Tun Teeblätter in Tasse. Gießen beinahe kochendes Wasser drauf. Machen ziehen lassen. Fertig sein.
